Some Things You Should Know About Mexico

According to UN Statistics you are 3 times more likely to be a victim of a crime in the U.S. than you are in Mexico.

Recent FBI Statistics indicate that in 2009 there were an estimated 1,318,398 violent crimes in the United States. That equates to 429.4 violent crimes per 100,000 people.

The same statistics give an even clearer picture. The murder rate (per 100,000 people) in Baltimore is 17.8, Washington D.C. 11 and Detroit is 22.2. In Mexico the murder rate is approximately 13.

The Mexican rate has actually decreased over the last several years. These numbers give credence to President Felipe Calderón, who insists that the worst violence is confined to certain regions and is mostly among gang members. He has accused the news media of exaggerating the violence.

"We've got problematic cities, yes," Calderón said in a speech on crime. "But we also have areas and states, especially tourist areas, that have murder rates equal to many countries in Europe."

The murder rate in Sonora, Mexico's second largest state (185,000 square Kilometres) where Puerto Penasco and La Bella Vita Resort are located is lower today than it was in the late 1990's.
